

Alligator males blow bubbles in their lovers' ears.

Bowerbirds build love shacks out of moss, berries, and snail shells.

Cardinals perform counter singing; the male and the female match and repeat songs together.

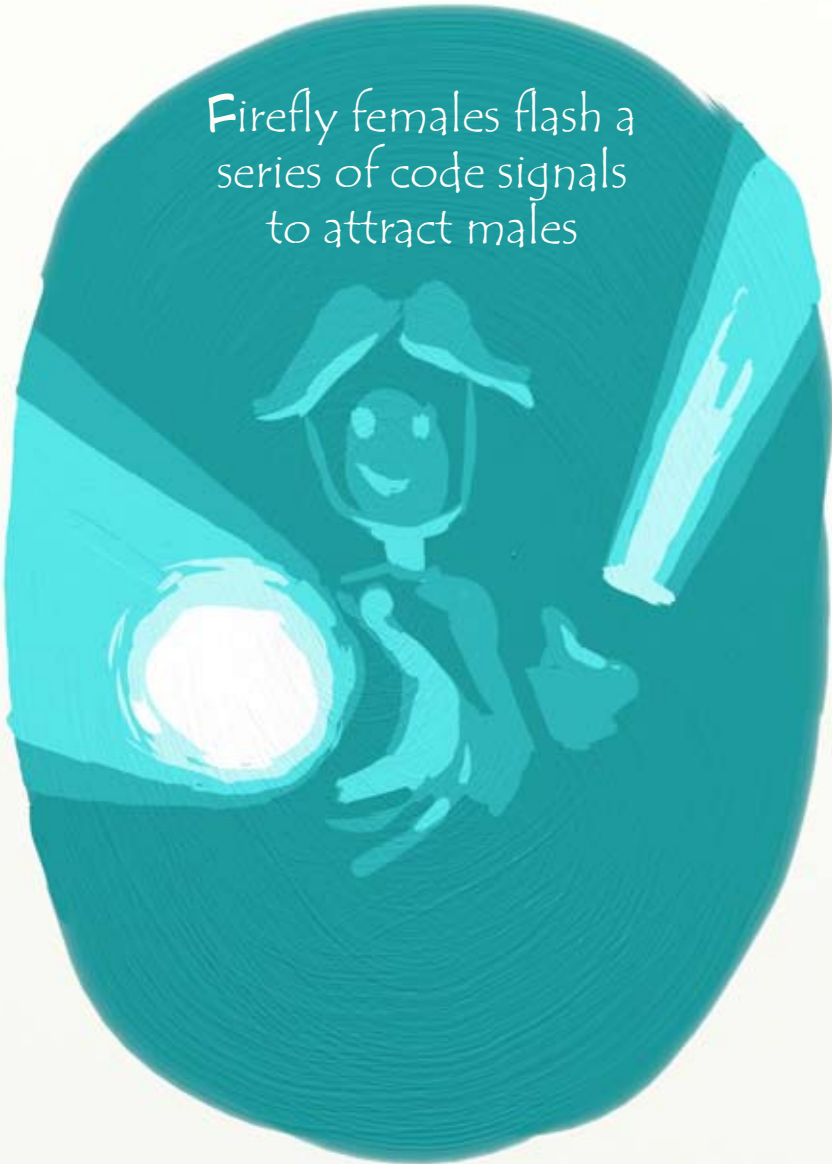

A Wood Duck female repeatedly flicks her bill back over her shoulder. The male raises his wings and tail and swims away.

Bald Eagles perform aerial acrobatics to impress and attract their mates.

Firefly females flash a series of code signals to attract males

Grasshopper males have 400 mating songs in their repertoire, each conveying a different feeling.

